NEW REGIME IN SIBERIA TO ASK AID OF WRANGEL

Vladivostok Government Trying To Reach Old Foe Of Soviet

CHITA SENDS ENVOY

Harbin Newspapers Take Varied Attitude Toward Usurpers.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, June 7.—The temporary Government has taken steps to establish communications with General Wrangel.

Many of the peasants' village committees have notified the Government of their willingness to support it, if the Government will uphold a properly representative Popular Assembly.

The Chita Government is sending M. Kolomnikov to Vladivostok as its representative in the new Maritime Buffer State.

Grodekovo has sent a protest to the Consular Corps against the latter's resolution debarring Ataman Semenoff from landing.

(Dalta News Agency)

China, June 1.—It is reported that the first skirmish has taken place between Japanese troops and the Russian partizans near Imen. The Japanese suffered a number of killed and wounded.

The Japanese by all appearances are changing their attitude and willing to begin negotations with the government of the Far Eastern Republic. The Japanese who sympathise with the overthrow consider the present moment especially favorable for retaining Japanese interests and, owing to the unstability of the Merkouloff government, regard the Government of the Far Eastern Republic as quite acceptable. They believe it will establish its long-cherished close relations with Japan.

AMERICANS FRIENDLY

The Americans do not render any assistance to the rebels and maintain a friendly attitude towards Russia. Their policy is directed towards further estrangement between Russia and Japan. All political groups and parties such as the Social-Revolutionaries, Social-Democrats and even Keppalists demand the preservation of People's Assembly. By dissolving the assembly the Merkouloff Government has completely lost authority in the district. The aim of Japan in abetting Semenoff is to facilitate negotiations with the Chita Government.

(Dalta News Agency)

Harbin, June 3.—The two-sided policy of the Japanese continues. Their attitude is plainly characterised in the last issue of the Vladivo Nippo (a Japanese newspaper) which says:

"The non-socialistic groups at Vladivostok are of a temporary nature, incapable of creating any real power. Their government cannot last long. Without the recognition of Chita Government, this government can have no guarantee of peace in the district. Only the People's Assembly, represented by all groups, can reconcile the different groups. At present when the authority of Merkouloff is limited to the business section from Svotlanskaya Street to Nevelsky Park, whence the authority of Antonoff begins, there is no doubt that a third party, namely, the People's Assembly, will have its say."

The Novosti Jizni (a non-socialist journal) in a number of articles prophesies an inglorious end of the Merkouloff Government, built upon the despair of Russian people and supported by foreign bayonets. It says, "It is impossible to form a People's Assembly by means of fraudulent elections excluding the workers. That will be a hybrid conference at the best.

COMPLETE ANARCHY

"Complete anarchy now exists in Vladivostok. Searches and arrests continue. Irresponsible militarists free criminals convicted for robbery and murder from the prisons. Public establishments are disorganised. The Centrosoyus (Central Co-operative Society) has been closed and the goods in its warehouses have been confiscated. Responsible workers in government establishments have been discharged and substituted by unsuitable persons, with the inevitable result of disorganisation."

According to the Japanese Telegraph Agency, the Japanese Command has given Kappelists 1,500 rifles and ammunition.

Ulster's New Leader

SIR James Craig, recently installed as Premier of Ulster. Sir James succeeded Sir Edward Carson, who for eleven years directed the activities of the Ulster Unionist Party. Sir James has been a member of the Imperial Parliament since 1906. He had long been the lieutenant of his predecessor, Sir Edward, and became prominent during the Home Rule crisis, which was suspended by the dramatic intervention of the World War. He was made a baronet in 1918 for war services, served in both the South African and World Wars, and has occupied three ministerial posts.

German Envoy To London Protests Allied Ultimatum

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 6.—Herr Sthamer, the German Ambassador, has presented a note to the Foreign Office, protesting against the Inter-Allied Commission's ultimatum to the German General Hoefer, ordering him to stop fighting as otherwise Allied troops would evacuate the German villages in the industrial region.

The Note contends that compliance with this order would mean that the evacuated regions would be exposed to a reign of terror by the Poles. Moreover, the note adds, the measures threatened by the Commission would make the unloosing of widespread civil war inevitable.

Berlin, June 7.—The Inter-Allied Commission's ultimatum to General Hoefer orders the German troops in Upper Silesia to withdraw to the line between Leschnitz and Dolina, both of which places are put at the disposal of General Hoefer.

The latter has replied that, out of consideration for the German population of the district he is unable and unwilling to recall the self-defence bands from the places which they are protecting. He appeals to the soldierly feelings of the commissioners, asking them not to execute their threat of withdrawal from the industrial towns which, he asserts, would be a direct encouragement of the Polish insurrection and would make it impossible for General Hoefer further to restrain his self-defence forces.

UTILITIES FIGHT IN FRENCHTOWN COMES TO AN END

Council And Company Reach Agreement On Extensions

RATES TO BE REDUCED

New Program Of Water And Light Taxes Effective Next Year

Complete agreement has been reached between the French Municipal Council and the public utilities company—bringing reduced water and electric rates to consumers, the promise of all needed extensions in service and assurance that all future contingencies will be considered from the point of best public interests.

The final conferences between the Council and the representatives of the utilities company have been characterised by a spirit of reasonableness and good will on both sides, with concessions by either, the secretary of the Municipal body, M. P. Legendre, announces and the conclusions reached are satisfactory to all concerned.

With regard to the Concession's water supply the company has engaged to undertake immediately the work necessary to insure the availability after July 1, 1922 of sufficient quantities to care for all private and public demands, to a maximum of 26,500 cubic meters per 24 hours. The company engages also to submit programs of extension as soon as the maximum daily consumption exceeds 22,000 cubic meters a day and to submit further extension plans whenever conditions demand. Steps are also to be taken to improve filtration and bacteriological examination and from July 1, 1922 the tax on meters is to be dropped 50 percent.

As to electric light, the company has promised to install before January 1, 1922 sufficient plant to furnish 4,950 k.w. and will propose to the Council a program of extension when the maximum demand reaches the 3,200 k.w. point, Council and company to agree on all future extensions. From July 1, 1922 the meter tax will be reduced 50 percent and from January 1, 1923 the tariff for supply of electricity for power and heating will be established by mutual agreement between the Council and company.

Tramway extensions call for the putting into service of five new cars and five trailers of regulation specifications in 1922. The company undertakes to study the problem of still further extension as traffic requirements make them necessary.

The agreement reached is considered adequately to cover present requirements and to insure that the development of the Concession will not be handicapped by lack of water, light or transportation facilities.

Buyers Of British Dyes Must Make Purchases Here

London, June 6.—In the House of Commons today, questioned regarding the refusal of the British Dyestuffs Corporation to supply British export firms with synthetic indigo, on the ground that the Corporation has its own selling arrangements in the Far East, Sir Philip Lloyd-Graeme, Director of Overseas Trade, pointed out that it was open to merchants supplying Chinese markets to obtain supplies in China through the Far Eastern Agents of the Corporation.

It was found to contain ten loaded rifles, 428 rounds of ammunition and a quantity of military equipment, it was said. Two men were sentenced to fourteen years each. DEATH ROLL IN FLOOD DISTRICT IN U.S. NOW 250

Waters In Colorado Receding —Officials Fear Pestilence

(Reuter's Service)

Denver, June 6.—The River Platte has overflowed, and a number of streets here have been submerged.

Pueblo, June 6.—Officials here express the opinion that the fatalities caused by the flood, following a cloudburst, do not exceed 250. The waters are now apparently receding.

The authorities fear a pestilence; already five hundred persons have been sent to hospital suffering from diphtheria, pneumonia and chicken-pox, as well as several cases of insanity.

Numerous spectacular rescues took place. In one case soldiers found a woman, who had stood for hours in the water up to her armpits, holding her baby above her head.

The floods have also greatly damaged several neighboring towns, the country all along the railway from Colorado Springs to Pueblo presenting scenes of desolation.

C. M. & ST. P. MAN RETURNING HOME AFTER TRIP EAST

St. Paul Railway Line Making Bid For Passenger Traffic From There To U.S.

After making a tour of Far East ports in the interests of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, Mr. Fred O. Finn, general agent for the Railway at Victoria, leaves this morning on the Omi Maru for Japan where he will catch the Fushimi Maru for Seattle.

Mr. Finn came from Seattle on the Admiral Line steamer Wenatchee, going to Manila and Hongkong on the liner after visiting Japan and making connections.

On the trip out he brought 1,500 folders for each port and these are being distributed throughout the Far East as forerunners to 25,000 more on the way.

The C. M. and St. P. folders for the traveler from the Orient to America via Seattle are the most attractive seen out here. They have been printed especially for the passenger from the Far East who plans to see America next.

The Railway is conducting an extensive campaign for Far Eastern passenger business in conjunction with the Admiral Line and other steamship companies running to the Orient from Seattle.

OUTLOOK FOR COAL STRIKE SETTLEMENT IMPROVED

Talk Of "National Pool" Dropped At Negotiations

NEW COST BASIS

Items In Production Expense To Be Mutually Agreed Upon

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 7.—Few particulars are available regarding yesterday's negotiations in relation to the coal strike, but it is understood that not a single word was said about a national pool. Nevertheless, smooth progress was made, and the outlook in favor of a settlement is greatly improved.

One of the points in which an agreement was reached was that the items to be treated as costs of production shall be mutually agreed upon by a national board on agreed principles. This will meet the miners' strong objection to the pre-war system of audits as unfair, because they allege that under this system labor was charged up with items that properly related to capital expenditure.

London, June 6.—The conference between the coal-owners and miners is proceeding. It is expected that the former's proposals will be submitted to a delegate conference of miners, which will decide the next step.

Later: Mr. Evan Williams, President of the Mining Association, stated at the Conference (which has adjourned till tomorrow) that the coal owners now realised that a subsistence wage for the lowest-paid workers should be guaranteed, and were prepared to suggest a flat-rate reduction of three shillings per shift, extending over a period of six months, in order to stabilise wages.

ANGLO-JAP PACT MUST SATISFY U.S. SAYS MEIGHEN

Canadian Premier Leaves To Attend Imperial Conference

(Reuter's Service)

Quebec, June 6.—Mr. Arthur Meighen, Prime Minister of Canada, has sailed to attend the Imperial Conference. It is stated that he is prepared to propose that the only subjects in the conference agenda that are capable of definitely being debated at present are: preparation for a special constitutional conference, a general review of the Empire's foreign problems, particularly as affecting the Dominions, the advisability of renewing the Anglo-Japanese Alliance and a preliminary consideration of some working method of arriving at a common understanding regarding external affairs which concern all parts of the Empire, as a preliminary to the proposed constitutional conference.

It is reliably understood that Mr. Meighen will only support the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty on condition that it is satisfactory to the United States but it is believed that he is prepared to be convinced that the renewal of the Alliance would best serve British interests.

The majority of Canadian members of Parliament endorse this view, with the stipulation that the treaty must not antagonise the United States, or impair a stronger friendship between Great Britain and America.

Mr. Meighen is particularly anxious to postpone the discussion of military and naval defence for the constitutional conference.

He considers that Canada's financial position prohibits her from embarking on a substantial naval program for the present.

ANGLO-FRENCH UNITY

(Reuter's Service)

Prague, June 2.—In an article entirely devoted to the question of Anglo-French relations, the Prager Press expresses the opinion that the maintenance of close harmony between France and Great Britain is a matter of the greatest moment to the whole world since it constitutes the only firm and substantial basis for a lasting peace.

Expectant Mother Rescues Baby From Bottom Of 20-Foot Well

MRS. Norman Gurling, of Greenburgh, N. Y., is the heroine of the vicinity and a movement is on foot to secure a Carnegie medal for her. Mrs. Gurling's fifteen months-old son, Norman, Jr., fell into an unused well in the rear of the Gurling home recently. The mother—who expected to give birth to another child shortly—went down into the well, a distance of twenty feet, and rescued the youngster. The sides of the well are slippery and Mrs. Gurling does not realise how she climbed down and brought her son, half-drowned, to the surface unassisted. A misstep would have meant death for both herself and little Norman. Not until Norman was again safe in his bed did Mrs. Gurling collapse.

One Gob, Soused, Does Not Make All Of Them Rowdies

BY ELSIE McCORMICK

There are two classes of misunderstood people in the world—those who are and those who say they are. The latter group includes sixteen year old girls distantly in love with the high-school physics professor, ladies whose real fear is that someone will understand them too well and coolies in the Mixed Court who were merely meditating on the landscape when a mean policeman came along and shook a few bolts of silk out of their clothes. The former group includes us when we try to speak Chinese, those who attempt to explain baseball to a lady brought up on cricket, and the average American sailor on shore-leave.

This doesn't mean that the navy man, like the alleged misunderstood lady, rests on a futurist divan after lighting a perfumed cigarette and tells the world that he isn't appreciated. Nor does it mean that he asks sympathy from everything singing soprano as does the husband who claims that his wife doesn't understand him, when as a matter of fact, she understands him well enough to get a divorce in any court there is except the one on motor car regulations.

No, the sailor doesn't advertise his inverted position in the popular understanding. For the same reason that one cake of Gorgonzola cheese can make more of an impression on its environment than a hundred pieces of the quiet, right-minded, and decently living Swiss variety, one sailor with a talent for unlovely adjectives and a capacity limited only by the length of time the bar will stay open prints himself in far larger type on the popular mind than ninety-nine well-behaved boys who do nothing more dangerous on shore than shoot things with a camera.

DENATURED SHORE LEAVE

If newspapers had space to print the doings of navy men in full rather than merely when they are, most of the reports would run as follows: "Mr. Archibald Blank, and his buddie, Mr. Carey Smith, spent a pleasant afternoon on shore-leave yesterday. Mr. Smith bought his sister a string of coral beads made out of unusually pure bone after which Mr. Blank parted with a large share of his month's stipend for a little idol which the Chinese curio man assured him was dug up in a royal tomb. After a visit to the movies, the boys had a riotous time on a package of spearmint and then returned to the ship, paying the ricsha man six times the usual fare."

But then unfortunately, the public does not consider the doings of Mr. Blank as news unless he knocks out a Sikh policeman or tries to occupy a piece of sidewalk simultaneously with a person of another nationality.

The uniform adds another kink to the situation. Suppose, for instance, all bank clerks had to wear a low-necked garb with little tael marks or dollar signs embroidered on the collar. Every time one of them left a cafe with a somewhat hazy outlook on life, at least half a dozen bystanders would exclaim, "There goes another one of those bank clerks. Isn't it awful the way they cut up?"

If one of them had a brush with the law, the story would probably carry the heading: "Another Disorderly Bank Clerk Arrested." Wearing a uniform causes the calling to stand out more prominently than the man and makes the individual responsible in the public mind for everything done by men in the same costume.

All these reflections grew out of a visit on the board the U.S.S. Huron and a talk with Captain H. I. Cone, who maintains that considering the number of men given liberty, the amount of disorderliness charged up to sailors is no greater than the average sustained by civilians. The vast majority of them spend their leave on shore in such dangerous and disorderly pastimes as buying curios, sight-seeing, taking snap-shots, shooting billiards at the Navy Y. M. C. A., and trying to find a place where they can get the same kind of ice-cream they used to dish out on the back-porch at home.

GOES AS HIGH BROWS

"Out of a complement of 790 men, 206 are petty officers," Captain Cone said. "This means training as specialists in some particular line and a fair degree of general education. Among the enlisted men are 118 with high-school diplomas and ten college graduates. A number of the men are taking correspondence courses given by American universities or by the International School at Scranton. The navy itself maintains forty-one schools for enlisted men in navigation, mechanical engineering, stenography, pharmacy, and nearly two score other subjects, from which several of our boys have graduated."

Incidentally we noted the mention of a Listeners' School, from which we assume some of Shanghai's Number One gossips also hold diplomas.

The fact that thirty-one percent of the commissioned officers in the United States Navy were formerly enlisted men indicates that sailors must do a few other things with

100 SHOT BY SOLDIERS AT ICHANG; FIRE LOSS HEAVY

Government Offices Plundered And Officials Killed

BANK FUNDS SAFE

Standard Oil Property Raided—Japanese Attacked

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Hankow, June 7, 4:50 p.m.—Messages received here today by Chinese and foreign firms and individuals report that over 100 persons were shot in the outbreak of mutinous troops at Ichang.

Government offices, including the tax office, wine and tobacco revenue offices and stamp duty offices have been plundered of everything and the chief of the stamp duty office has been killed.

The messages report that the mutiny was carried out by troops of the 21st Mixed Brigade under Wang Tu-ching acting in consort with miscellaneous groups of bandits. The sacking of the city began shortly after 10 o'clock on Saturday night and through the following day robbery of shops and dwellings by wholesale continued uninterrupted and unrestrained.

The building occupied by the Bank of China and the newly completed building of the Ichang Chamber of Commerce were completely burned down in the conflagration started by the looters. The strong room of the Bank of China resisted the flames and the robbers therefore were unable to possess themselves of its contents.

Besides other foreign establishments wrecked and looted, those of Standard Oil Company's agents were raided and a number of Japanese shops and offices were burned. Several attacks were made upon the Japanese consular residence.

Much of the looting had been halted Monday, but the fires that were started have not been stopped.

WIRES FOR AID

The Japanese Consul-General at Ichang has wired for immediate aid from the Japanese naval squadron at Hankow. The captain of the steamer Tungting which sailed down river shortly before the outbreak reports that sharp firing was heard when his vessel left Ichang. The British gunboat Gnat is said to have been at Ichang when the outbreak started.

Damages of this mutiny far exceed those incurred in the uprising six months ago.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hankow, June 5.—The s.s. Tungting of the China Navigation Company, which left Ichang after the first outbreak, reports that rifle-firing and burning of property were then going on. The Japanese Consulate suffered.

H. M. gunboat Gnat has been sent to the scene.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Ichang, June 6.—Damage done by mutinous soldiers who took possession of the city early Monday is more widespread than was at first believed and the work of destruction and wholesale robbery by government troops who are wholly uncontrolled is still continuing.

Every form of commercial activity has been brought to a standstill. Virtually every Chinese shop in the city has been looted and wrecked and hundreds of homes of Chinese are in ashes. Thousands who have lost every possession have been rendered destitute.

The building that was occupied by the Bank of China has been burned to the ground and that which housed Young Brothers Banking Corporation also has been destroyed.

Additional reports received in Shanghai yesterday concerning the uprising of troops at Iching indicate that both the loss of life and the destruction of property will be greater than was occasioned in the former outbreak of troops at Ichang six months ago when about 60 Chinese were killed, hundreds wounded and property valued at $2,000,000 was stolen and destroyed.

TORCH IS APPLIED

It is known that the trouble started in the early hours of the morning on Monday and within a short time after the soldiers cast off all semblance of control and began their attack on the city a fire was started in a group of Chinese shops and dwellings near the East Gate. The conflagration was fanned by a strong wind and it was estimated that not less than a thousand buildings of all kinds had been destroyed by nightfall

American naval authorities in Shanghai were of the opinion that the two American gunboats Palos and the Elcano had arrived at Ichang yesterday and it is believed also that Japanese, British and one Chinese gunboat also had arrived.

Reports vary concerning the number of persons that have been killed but generally it is accepted that the total will run considerably more than a hundred while it is known also the large numbers were wounded. All of the Chinese government revenue offices were raided and looted by the soldiers and the Chief of the Bureau of Stamp Revenue is said to have been killed.

CAUSE OF OUTBREAK

Interference on the part of officials at Ichang with the traffic in opuim that soldiers and certain of their officers have been carrying on is believed here to be the cause of the outbreak. Vast quantities of the drug, grown in Szechuen province, are smuggled on native junks down the Yangtsze and are taken ashore at Ichang. In the past month a campaign to suppress the traffic has been in progress and large quantities of opium have been seized.

A message received yesterday by the Shanghai office of the Bank of China is as follows:

"The mutiny which broke out the day before yesterday was more serious than the last one. Your Ichang office was completely burned and looted."

It was stated that the money loss of the Bank of China would not be considerable even in the event that the looters had been able to obtain possession of the bank's strong box, because since the first uprising but little money has been kept at the Ichang office, which ranks as a sub-office of the bank.

WIRES ARE OUT

So far as is known no messages dated later than Monday have been sent out of Ichang and this has given rise to the belief that telegraphic service down the river to Hankow has been cut off as happened in the former outbreak last November.

Mackenzie and Company and Butterfield and Swire, both of which have offices at Ichang located on the Bund where much destruction was wrought, had received no word yesterday from their Ichang representatives. Messages received by Jardine, Matheson and Company and by the British American Tobacco Company confirmed other reports published concerning the uprising but no report of damage done to the offices of either of these firms came in the messages. The Standard Oil Company and the Robert Dollar Company had received no further information yesterday concerning the mutiny.

Capt. Robert Dollar, who is making a tour of China, and Mr. J. Harold Dollar left Monday night for Ichang shortly after the first word of the Ichang uprising had been received.

others, have arrived at Harbin en route to Chita.

According to information from Nikolsk-Ussurisk, all the arrested persons in the town have been released under the pressure of the Japanese, and are being banished in the direction of Habarovsk.

JAPANESE POLICY

The policy of the Japanese Command will be definitely settled with the arrival of General Tachibana, who is expected to reach Vladivostok on board the Hosan Maru on June 4. Major Mike has arrived at Harbin on his way to Chita with special instruction from his government.

Persecution of democratic press at Harbin has begun. The reactionary organs are spreading rumors of contemplated strikes of railwaymen. The committee of the Railwaymen's Union in an open letter warns the workers not to listen to these provocative rumors.

The executive board of the Council of Industrial Unions in the Chinese Eastern Railway zone has adopted a resolution against the acts of a handful of traitors, who, with the help of interventionists, want to drive the workers into a new civil war.

The Chairman of the Council of Directors, Mr. Antonoff, and the Directors Messrs. Maslenikoff and Berlatsky, and the Chairman of the Russian Delegation on the Russo-Japanese Conciliatory Committee, who are stopping at Harbin on their way to Chita, have given an interview to the local Delta correspondent to whom they stated as follows with regard to the Vladivostok events:

Smiles from the Mixed Court

The rest of Waung Ching-foo's costume seemed to Havildar 386 to be scarcely en rapport with the shining pair of brown foreign boots which Waung was bearing, by ricsha, along Manila Road.

The Sikh was even more dubious of the combination after he had stopped the vehicle and elicited from the passenger that the latter was by profession a bamboo coolie. Besides, Waung couldn't seem to remember where he had bought the new footgear. So the policeman jerked him hastily out of the ricsha and hustled him to the station, while the ricsha coolie scampered around the corner as though he were on the trail of a tourist.

In Court Waung disclaimed any intent whatever toward the boots. They were in the ricsha before he boarded it, he said.

The previous fare had evidently forgotten to take them with him and the ricsha coolie, desirous of averting suspicion from himself, had invited the witness to ride along and make things appear plausible. Not being averse to free transportation he had consented. But there was neither plausibility nor extent to the ride.

While allowing that the ricsha coolie's rapid defection without even a wail for his fare lent a considerable amount of substance to the yarn, the Court held that Waung's suspicion as to the ownership of the boots was sufficient to rate him as compounding a larceny. A week from yesterday Waung will probably start out on a hunt for a certain ricsha coolie and if he has any luck there'll be another Mixed Court case.

Obtaining money fraudulently from people in San Francisco by pretense that it was to go toward China famine relief was the charge brought against two Chinese who appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday. No testimony was given and the case was remanded for one week at the request of Detective Sub-Inspector Kay of Central station to permit further investigation.

OR WHAT HAVE YOU?

Several years ago, as may be remembered, an ambitious Chinese won a year's free board and lodging and publicity in this column by stealing a steam roller. Wong Kyi-liang was evidently desirous of eclipsing this attainment. So Wong stole a sawmill.

The sawmill was the property of Li Lai-tseu, who several months ago grew tired of it, or ran out of logs or something and had it stored in an old temple on East Yalu Road. Having occasion to engage once more in lumber operations, or perhaps a chance to sell the plant, he went the other day to inspect it—and found that there wasn't enough machinery left to furnish props for the last act in a melodrama.

Wong, it appears, had abstracted the outfit, a section at a time, by presenting forged orders to the watchman. Wong was located but he had farmed the mill equipment out so extensively among local machine shops that the case had to be adjourned a week to allow him to assist the police in the round-up. He comes up next Tuesday for disposal.

their time besides attempting to break into jail. Each year the Secretary of the Navy is allowed one hundred appointments of midshipmen to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, selection to be drawn from among the enlisted men. Schools for the training of sailors wishing to take the examinations have been established in Newport and San Francisco.

The men of the Huron helped in the issuing of a black leather bound book on "The Far Eastern Cruise of the U.S.S. Huron," illustrated by some matchless views received from the crew's camera enthusiasts. In Peking the sailors made several extensive sight-seeing tours and apparently they took in everything on the landscape. The Huron personnel also issue a smaller publication twice a month titled "Asiatic Fleet News."

We are not trying to plant the idea that American sailors go around peering at guidebooks through tortoise shell rimmed glasses and hold debates on board ship afterwards as to whether a temple carving belonged to the Tang or Ming dynasty. They don't.

Members of the Women's Overseas League or the Social Service Department of the American Woman's Club who meet them frequently at entertainments, know them to be nice, diffident youngsters, who, after they have ceased being conscious of their hands and feet and have stopped trying to swallow their larnyx, warm up conversationally to the point of telling all about a little girl in Indiana or somewhere.

HAIL FROM THE BUSHES

The majority of them seem to be boys from inland states and many of them come from farms with a mother in a capacious white apron featured in the background. There are many unexpected packages wrapped up in a uniform.

At a party given for sailors one evening recently we met a college graduate and fraternity man from a well-known university and another earnest youth who was so impressed by the need for Christian education in China that he had resolved to come back after his discharge and become a missionary.

This again proves how unfair it is to judge the navy men only by the few who attempt to make a door-mat of the municipal ordinances. In no other instances of which we know are the men in jail taken as the representatives of a community.

There are boys in the navy of all varieties of talents, all sorts of dispositions, all degrees of education, and from all stations in life. Shanghai women who have met them socially at dances and entertainments have experienced only perfect courtesy, even if it is sometimes administered in a wrapping of untrimmed grammar.

The eagerness with which the men flock to "nice" parties shows that their association with people of another type is only the fruit of loneliness on their part and forgetfulness on the part of American civilians.

And some of those boys are gosh-blamed homesick, too.

BOY KILLED BY FALL

Tragedy in strange form came to a Chinese lad of 13 on Yangtszepoo Road Monday evening. A Sikh policeman who was patrolling the street noticed four or five boys engaged in throwing stones at each other. As he approached them they fled and one in trying to leap across a trench dug in the street by the Waterworks company fell short and dropped into the excavation. He was unconscious when removed and was dead when examined at St. Luke's hospital.

China To Have Services Of Dr. John A. L. Waddell, Famous Bridge Engineer

American Member Of International Board Invited By Peking To Pass On Designs Says He Will Undertake All Problems Submitted

Dr. John A. L. Waddell, educator, writer and held to be the world's foremost bridge builder, said yesterday that though he had accepted an invitation of the Chinese government to come to this country to perform a specific service he intended in the months that he will be in China to place himself wholly at the service or the government and undertake any engineering problems that may be submitted to him.

"If the government will submit its problems to me," he said, "I will undertake to solve them whatever they may be." And it may be added that whatever construction enterprises Peking may turn over to Doctor Waddell, it is hardly possible that any of them will be outside of the great range of his practical experience. On page 10 of the Sunday issue of THE CHINA PRESS a summarised review of the more important achievements of Doctor Waddell fills the larger part of a column. The reader is referred to this.

TAUGHT IN TOKIO

Aside from advising in connection with bridge, railway and other building Doctor Waddell, who has devoted some portion of his career to teaching, said he believed he could give aid of value in the field of technical education in China. Forty years ago Doctor Waddell was professor of civil engineering in Tokio Imperial University and in the years that followed his return to America he has probably done more than any one man to bring Japanese engineering to the position it holds, for there has been a steady stream of young Japanese engineers going from East to West to study and work with Doctor Waddell in his American offices for periods varying from two to five years.

Doctor Waddell long has been a familiar figure in the lecture halls of the leading technical schools in the United States and he said yesterday that it was a part of his creed to give every aid to young engineers.

"I have never refused a request from a school to lecture, however busy," he added, "and I have even found time occasionally to give series of lectures."

The specific purpose for which Doctor Waddell came to China is to act on an international board of consulting engineers that will pass on designs for a new bridge over the Yellow River. The new bridge is to be a single track railway bridge 2,800 meters in length that is to replace the present bridge on the Peking-Hankow line which was built some years ago by Belgian engineers. The old structure for some time has been in danger of going out. The new bridge will be built somewhere within a mile of the site of the old bridge. No estimate of the cost of the undertaking has yet been made public.

In choosing a board to pass on the designs of bidders the Chinese Government decided to ask representatives of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Japan and the United States to act. Doctor Waddell is the American representative.

67 YEARS YOUNG

Doctor Waddell, who is accompanied by Mrs. Waddell, is making his second trip to China but for all practical purposes it is the first time he has seen Shanghai, for it was just 51 years ago when he was here before as a youth of 16. Which reveals that Doctor Waddell is 67 years old, a fact not to be guessed from his appearance which in every aspect is that of a man in his early fifties.

There's no secret about it keeping young," the doctor explained, cheerfully. "Plenty of hard work does it. Of course," he added, "a man should be interested in his work. He went on to explain that he arose every morning at a quarter to 5 o'clock.

"I get down to my New York office at 7 o'clock," he went on, "and I usually get considerable work done before the others come along about 9 o'clock. Then usually I stay for an hour or two writing or doing other work after they go home in the afternoon."

He exhibited a little red note book that he carries.

THINGS TO BE DONE

"I have found this a mighty handy thing," he remarked. "It's my 'things to be done' book. I jot down everything that I have to look after at all odd times in this book so I never forget any of my work. When a thing's done I just cross it off the book. If it isn't crossed out in the book I know it hasn't been done."

In addition to the long list of honors that have been conferred upon Doctor Waddell, decorations by royalty, degrees of colleges and schools, awards from societies in his profession and others, one of the most noteworthy was that conferred by the French Government shortly after the signing of the Armistice when he was elected a member of the French Academy of Science. He is the first American engineer to achieve this honor.

Doctor Waddell and Mrs. Waddell will leave tomorrow morning for Peking.

Old Urga Troops Arrive At Kalgan

(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, June 7. The military commanders in the latter city state they will be replaced by Fengti in troops. The activity of the authorities indicates that the much-discussed Mongolian expedition is still in the air.

Jatz Y. T. King,
Plaintiff,
v.
A. O. Anderson and Co.,
Defendant.
Cause No. 1384
ORDER
Filed June 7, 1921.
Acting Clerk.

SYLLABUS

Injunction: Temporary Order. Where, upon hearing on bill and affidavit, together with oral testimony, it appears that a defendant, admittedly in a precarious financial condition, has threatened to dispose of certain securities belonging to plaintiff but held by way of guaranty, defendant will be restrained from such disposal until the actual state of accounts between the parties can be determined.

F. J. Schuhl, Esquire for plaintiff.
R. T. Bryan, Jr., Esq., for defendant.

Lobingier, J.

This is an application for a restraining order to prevent the sale by defendant of certain securities alleged to be "of the value of more than Taels 50,000.00" deposited with it by plaintiff under an agreement by which he acted as defendant's compradore. The defendant has not yet answered but files a lengthy affidavit setting forth various correspondence between the parties and other averments in opposition to the relief sought. It is also urged as a matter of law that the bill is defective in containing no averment of irreparable damage or of want of adequate legal remedy. The authority cited in support of these objections relates to a permanent injuction sought by bill alone and if such were the case here the release could not be granted without an amendment of the bill; but the same authority states the following principle:

"If the complainant shows that an irreparable injury will probably be suffered by him before the final hearing, that there is a reasonable probability that he will establish the facts as he alleges, and that the injunction will not cause a great injury to defendant, a preliminary injunction should issue to maintain the status quo, despite the conflict as to facts."

Moreover this case is submitted not on the bill alone but upon the affidavit already mentioned and oral testimony taken in behalf of both parties and these we think supply the defects pointed out in the bill. For the securities in question include title deeds to real property and, once disposed of plaintiff's interest in the property would, under the local system of land transfer, be lost. True he might bring an action for damages but defendant's affidavit recites information from "the home office of the defendant that said company was either in liquidation, bankruptcy, or in the hands of a receiver," and under such circumstances the prospects of obtaining damages appear quite remote. The showing of irreparable injury and want of adequate legal remedy would seem therefore to be sufficient.

It is however recited in the affidavit:

"That said defendant has no intention and does not propose to sell said title deeds and fantans until the losses for which said plaintiff is responsible are properly and accurately ascertained, and said defendant will suffer great and irreparable damage if it is restrained and enjoined from selling said securities, as it is entitled to do in accordance with the terms of said compradore agreement."

But how can defendant "suffer great and irreparable damage" by being prevented from doing what it "has no intention and does not propose to" do? Besides plaintiff testifies that defendant's manager informed him that he would sell the property if plaintiff's accounts, which are disputed, were not paid; and while the manager denies this one of his letters embodied in the affidavit states that "it will probably be necessary to sell all of the real estate" and his answer to another letter from plaintiff requesting him not to sell was "please be advised that we will abide by the terms of our agreement" which, as we have seen, defendant interprets as entitling it to sell. Under such a showing there is clearly no ground for applying the rule invoked by defendant's counsel that a parmanent * "injunction will be refused when defendant's denies having any intention to do the acts in question, 'and there is no evidence that his denial is untrue.'"

On the whole we are of the opinion that plaintiff shows a reasonable probability that he will suffer an irreparable injury before the final hearing and establish the facts alleged and that under the rule above quoted he is entitled to a restraining order pending an examination into the state of accounts between the parties though not to a permanent injunction unless the bill should be amended.

The defendant is accordingly restrained until further order of this Court from disposing of any of the securities mentioned in plaintiff's bill.

By the Court,
C. S. LOBINGIER,
Judge.

The defendant's plea was that he was so drunk he did not know what he was doing.

Mr. D. N. Fulton of the revenue department stated that the money was taken between March 27 and April 15 and that $684 had been returned. The accused stated that he had been out of employment for a long time previous to securing the Municipal job and had used all the money to pay debts. The shop-assistant was fined $100. Two other Chinese appeared yesterday on the charge of keeping opium for sale, Mr. G. D. Hongkong And Shanghai Split Even On First Day Of Interport Play; Doubles May Decide Tennis Tournament

SHANGHAI and Hongkong broke even in yesterday's play at the Cercle Sportif, so that it begins to look as though the doubles match is going to decide which city is going to carry off the interport tennis honors.

Ng Sze-kwong came back magnificently after his unsatisfactory showing for China last week in the Olympics, and defeated Mr. Mansel-Smith in a very prettily played five set match, while M. W. Lo of Hongkong gave a good exhibition against Tanaka despite the loss of the match in three straight sets.

The Mansel-Smith—Ng match attracted the larger portion of the gallery and the spectators were treated to an excellent brand of tennis on court Number 1. The Hongkong player kept the upper hand throughout the match, leading always on the odd set. His backhand was beautiful to watch and he seemed to be too steady and clever for his Shanghai opponent.

Mansel-Smith played a good game, but he tired sooner than his opponent, and seemed to be too timid about coming to the net. Probably he could not stand the strain of coming up, but he made most of his aces by this method.

Ng was strong yesterday in every department of the game. In the long exchanges from the back of the court he generally won the point, and when he came to the net, as he frequently did at the opportune moment, he usually made sure of the point by sharp and well-placed volleys.

Mansel-Smith made more errors when he approached the net, and his overhead work was neither as sure nor as decisive as Ng's. Had he stroked the ball more instead of playing the soft chop, which had no terrors for his wily opponent, he might have altered the outcome.

Ng is the cleverest strategist we have seen on Shanghai courts for some time. His short shots just over the net and his accurate lobbing make him a most baffling player. He has speed on his backhand and plays the sidelines well with his deceptive backhand drive.

First Set

Ng won the toss and elected to serve. He took the first game after deuce had been called and then proceeded to take Mansel-Smith's serve at love. He then took the third game and led at 3-0 before the Shanghai player won a game. This was the only game the latter won in the first set, for Ng took the next three games running with the loss of only two points, and the set at 6-1.

Mansel-Smith could not get going, and was bothered by Ng's service which took him out of the court nearly every time. Ng won 23 points to his opponent's 12.

Second Set

The Shanghai player started off better in the second set, and after taking his own service broke through on a long deuce game and led at 2-0. Ng promptly retaliated and brought the games to 2-2. At 3-3 Mansel-Smith by good net play won his own serve, broke through and led at 5-3. Ng here broke through, and it looked like a deuce set, but the Shanghai player rose to the occasion and again captured his opponent's serve on a deuce game, and the set at 6-4. Smith was playing better, but his game lacked sting and Ng looked much better. The points in this set were very close, 40 to 36 in favor of Mansel-Smith.

Third Set

The third set started out well, but Mansel-Smith was evidently tired out from his effort in the second set. After each player had won two services, the Shanghai player threw away his game on two double-faults. Mansel-Smith's service was much weaker and less certain than usual yesterday, and he offended in the matter of double-faults no less than seven times in the afternoon's play.

The last three games of the set were won easily by the Hongkong champion with the loss of only two points. Mansel-Smith was uncertain and netted a great many shots, so that he won only half the number of points which his opponent did. The score was 6-2, and the points stood 26-13.

Fourth Set

This set brought the best tennis of the match, and showed the Shanghai player winning out on sheer nerve and grit. Ng took the first two games handily, and the Shanghai supporters were resigning themselves to the inevitable. Mansel-Smith came back and even-

SAYS "BUGS" Baer: WALL STREET BULLS MARKET

Curb Communique Throws Skunk Cabbage Bouquets At Champion Of Roughtown

BY 'BUGS' BAER

Dear Sir:

We, the people, and nothing but the people, demand the truth even if you have to lie to give it to us.

Didn't Bailjumper Blipp make Gink do a lammister on April 19, 1875? He did.

It was the centennial of Paul Revere's steeplechase and Gink covered more territory than Paul, Blipp threw his chin at Gink from so many angles that Gink thought the air was full of hostile jaws.

Banging Blipp on the chin hurt him not. Every crash on his jaw resulted in an improvement.

Finally Gink quit with defeat right within his grasp.

Yours at the present market quotation, VIN GRAHAM,
Wall Street.

We invite competition in our marvellous canvas eater, Gink Fowler, Monarch of Roughtown long before the Smith Brothers started shooting marbles with coughdrops. King of the knuckle embargo years before Mike Donaldson swiped a whistle out of George Washington's baby carriage. Now, old and bent like a loaded washline on Monday, but still blooming with the fire of youth that is sold by bootleggers of Roughtown.

Was there ever a thumpster like Gink? He lived on sardines for seventy years and never knew that they would taste better if you opened the can first. He had an eye like the uncle of an eagle One day he dropped a penny into a Roughtown chewing gum machine. No gum danced forth. So Gink took a once champion swing at the works and four chunks of chewing gum dropped into the Mikado of Japan's lap. That was 14,000 miles via Queenstown and the Suez Canal.

PINCHED AT 109

The punch drove Gink's knuckles back into his vest pocket. He was very irritable. Making a fortune of $54,000,000 in the ring, he was pinched at the age of 109 for swiping a doormat.

Bailjumper Blipp challenged Roughtown's champion skull denter, but Gink ignored it with appropriate gestures. He offered to crack Gink's head on suspicion. But Gink was not one who could be purchased by mere bribes. He told the Bailjumper to get a rep. Blipp took on Arrowhead Klootz, the germweight champion of Greasetown. He won in a couple of kicks. Then he fought Puddler Jones, the dollyweight champ. He won without taking off his straitjacket. Finally he met and flattened Six-Finger Wimple, the leader of the pieweights.

Gink had to meet Bailjumper, or forfeit his franchise in the Porchclimbers' Sorority. Fowler fought that entire fight in a rocking chair. Whenever Bailjumper swung at him threateningly Gink would rock back and forth furiously. These were the tactics that won for Napoleon at Moscow and Waterloo.

CRUSHED IN PANIC

While they were fighting the heat of the summer sun melted the referee's honesty and he awarded the gate receipts to himself on a technicality.

Held spellbound and breathless by the ferocity of the slaughter, eighteen Roughtown citizens were crushed in a panic at the exits. A visitor who didn't realise the high ideals of Roughtown tried to go through the Mayor's pockets and had his hand chewed by a Gila monster. So intent was Gink on eradicating his enemy that it was impossible to drag him away from the telephone. But why go further with history? You've read the rest in McGuffy's Fourth Reader.

First Round In Lawn Bowls Open Championship Must Be Over By June 27

The following is the result of the draw for the open Lawn Bowls championships in connection with the singles Pairs and Rinks.

The luck of the draw seems to have been with the Juniors as all their three rinks are drawn at home.

Glancing over the ties one is bound to admit there is going to be some grim struggles before one or other of the Rinks are beaten—but more of this anon.

Last evening at the Navy Y.M.C.A. an informal reception was held in honor of the incoming executive Secretary, Mr. Paul W. Brown, who comes to the Shanghai Navy work after a most successful experience in the Navy Y.M.C.A. at Bremerton, Washington, and prior to that in army work at Ross Field, during the war.

Among those present were members of the American Woman's Club, the Overseas League, Admiral Joseph Strauss of the American Asiatic Fleet, Judge C. S. Lobingier, members of the National Committees of Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., the City Y.M.C.A. together with a number of friends who have been much interested in the Y.M.C.A. work here for Navy men. The orchestra of U.S.S. Huron rendered delightful music. Light refreshments were served.

SHANGHAI BASEBALL PLAYERS MUTINY; MALONEY ORGANISES SECOND TEAM OF BOLSHEVIKI

Will Play Regulars Thursday At 5 p.m., And Work In Doubleheader Saturday With Nine From Helena Or Wilmington

The players of the Shanghai Baseball Club have mutinied. They have turned Bolsheviki—at least half of them.

It all happened like this. Twenty-eight players comprise the staff of Captain Cy Wilhoit, but according to time-honored custom only nine men are permitted to work in a game—that is at one time. By a simple bit of arithmetic one may deduce that ninteen must therefore sit themselves down on the well-worn bench and spend their time in hoping that they will be called in to save the day or something.

But no such calls have come of late excepting the now historic call which somebody issued on Monday last, that took Dennison out of the game he was winning easily from the 15th Infantry and sent Moody, and Jack Smith, both cold and sore and unprepared in to do their dooty. And as a result of the scarcity of proper chances, the men have been suffering muchly in morale.

As everyone knows, a ball player wants to play ball. And it is also common knowledge that every ball player that amounts to shucks, when he is on the bench trying to hatch out note and what-nots, begins to grouch. He thinks he is better than the men in the field, and wants only a chance to prove it.

That's one of the good things about this mutiny—it will give every rookie among the aforesaid twenty-eight his chance to prove himself. It will also give the subscribers to the Shanghai Baseball club a chance to see all of his own home brethren in action.

MAL HEADS TAVARISH

The uprising came yesterday evening. Mal Maloney, it appeared, was the instigator of the Bolshevistic movement—he is Tavarish No. 1. He has taken bodily, from Cy Wilhoit's string of players fifteen men, and he's going to train them and coach them and when all is set he will play them against Cy's pets, and he says he'll beat them.

Maloney was out at the park yesterday with the few players that had heart enough to don a uniform after Monday's fiasco with the Infantry, and he was full of his new propaganda. He had the men so worked up that they all wanted to secede from the Regulars and carry on under Mal's Red Banner. But Mal spoke to them as Lenine and Trotsky should have addressed the mob at Petrograd back in 1917:

"We don't want the world," he said. "We will leave Wilhoit his lineup, and then we will get ourselves together and show the Shanghai public that Bolshevised baseball will prove to be the salvation of the game."

Maloney lamped the boys over with his one good eye, and divided them up like this:

Regulars	Bolshies
Wilhoit	lb Bristow

FORMER SHANGHAI ATHLETE EQUALS WORLD'S RECORD

De Loss W. Walker Meets Best Mark For Running High Jump

De Loss W. Walker, son of Mr. J. W. Walker of Nanking equaled the world's record in the Y.M.C.A. International Hexathlon competition at Springfield, Mass., recently, for the running high jump, scoring 104 points.

The Hexathlon meet, held among all the associations of the United States and Canada, saw over a dozen of America's best jumpers in competition. They tussled for two hours and Walker continued after outjumping all his rivals, until he equaled the record.

Walker was captain of the "Y" track team in 1917 which won the International championship in their division and also defeated numerous nearby cities in dual meets.

Twelve years ago when he was a student in De Pauw university he broke the Indiana state record. In 1913 when competing for the New York Athletic Club he won the national title jumping in Chicago.

Following this Walker came to China on an appointment with the Peking government and during the International Games held in Shanghai in May 1915 he set a new Far Eastern record for the high jump.

Walker now is president of the allied mining companies in Pittsburg, Pa., with branch offices in Springfield, Mass., and he always journeys to the Massachusetts city for the "Y" winter games.

PLAY TOMORROW

Thursday at 5 o'clock these two bunches of players will meet in the first game of a series for the championship of Shanghai. On Saturday, if all goes well, and somebody don't throw in the well-known monkey wrench, the Bolsheviki will meet a team from the U.S.S. Wilmington or the Helena, whichever has the stronger and braver nine, in one half of a doubleheader.

The Regulars will play the other half against the Huron team in the third game of their series of five. Perhaps another doubleheader will develop for Sunday, with both Regulars and Bolsheviki working.

Johnny Knowlan, the busy and popular little manager of the baseball team has quit. He resigned Sunday. He wants it known to the public that it was on Sunday that he resigned. Sunday according to Johnny's calendar was just 24 hours before Monday, when Shanghai was defeated from their own bench in the interport game with the Tientsin Infantry.

It has not yet been announced who succeeds Knowlan.

Ng And Tanaka Victors At Tennis

ed up matters, bringing the score to 2-2.

He tired after this and Ng again pulled away, winning the next two games, both at love. He was coming up to the net and smothering the Shanghai player's chops, and killing his lobs with perfect smashing.

The seventh, eighth, and ninth games all went to deuce, with the Shanghai player winning each game. Ng had the misfortune to slip and fall at the net when he led at 4-2 and forty-fifteen with a good chance to make it 5-2, but Smith made sure of the easy return with a nice stroke down the side.

The tenth game fell to Shanghai and the set at 6-4. The points were exceedingly close, and although Shanghai won the set, Hongkong scored more points, 32-29.

Fifth Set

After a brief rest, play was resumed with Mansel-Smith serving. He lost his serve twice running, and Ng led at 4-0. It looked a speedy end, but the remembrance of the Shanghai's player's uphill fight in the preceding set left some hope that he would pull himself out of the hole again. He captured the next two games at deuce and then his own service at love, before Ng could stop him. Ng took the eighth game on his own service, and then led on the set game at 40-15. The Shanghai player made it deuce by steady play, and then lost the vantage point. Again with only one point for the match, Mansel-Smith brought the score back to deuce and then took the game.

It was a splendid effort, but it left nothing in reserve for the final game. Ng played faultlessly, and his opponent netted the first two points. With 40-15, Ng scored a beautiful backhand drive down the side and took the match 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4. The points in the fifth sets were 38-33 in favor of Hongkong, and the total number of points for the match were: Hongkong 155, Shanghai 127.

TANAKA-LO MATCH

Lo played well against Tanaka and held him well for two sets. The Shanghai player was at the top of his game, and his speed was too much for Lo. Only a small portion of the gallery witnessed this match, and the quality of play certainly deserved a larger number of spectators.

Tanaka started off by winning the first two games of the first set, and it looked as though Lo was not going to dispute the match very seriously. But he took the next three games on good play, and led at 4-3, 5-4 and 6-5 before the Shanghai player could regain the lead of the odd game and win the set at 8-6.

In the second set, after dropping the first three games, Lo again came up from behind and led at 5-4, before Tanaka could successfully assert himself and win at 7-5.

In the third set, after each player had broken through the other's serve, Tanaka got down to work and decided not to have any more narrow escapes. He ran off the next five games, and the match 8-6, 7-5, 6-1. The feature of the match was Tanaka's back-hand drive and the improvement in his forehand both in speed and control.

TODAY'S PLAY

This afternoon at 4:15 the doubles will be played at the Country Club between Mansel-Smith and Pott for Shanghai and Ng and Wei for Hongkong. Through the kindness of the Country Club the public is cordially invited.

On Thursday afternoon at 4:15 the other two singles matches will be played at the French Club. Mansel-Smith will oppose Lo. Tanaka will again try conclusions against Ng. He lost to Ng in Hongkong last year, but beat Ng in the Olympics last week.

Your Health Comes First
Good Health is your most valuable asset;—its preservation should, therefore, receive your most careful consideration. An important point which should always be borne in mind is the fact that a great many forms of ill-health can be traced, directly or indirectly, to disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is wise, therefore, to keep these organs in healthy activity. When they show any signs of derangement let that reliable medicine, Beecham's Pills, be taken at once. Always deal with digestive ailments in time. They are far-reaching in their possibilities of mischief if neglected, as they too often are. And yet it is generally easy to keep fit and well and free from many debilitating ailments by the simple use of

MISSIONARIES HAVE TEA, THEN HOLD ELECTION

Business Session Follows Entertainment At Dr. Parker's Home

A lawn party at the residence of Dr. A. P. Parker, 19 Quinsan Road, and a business session held later in the chapel of the Soochow University Law School featured the meeeting of the Shanghai Missionary Association which took place yesterday afternoon. Ladies of the Methodist Episcopal Mission and the Methodist Episcopal Mission, South, were hostesses at the tea held before the regular program.

The most important item of business transacted was the election of the following officers to serve next year: President, Dr. J. Darroch; vice-president, Reverend C. E. Lobenstine; secretary, T. W. Dovey; treasurer, Reverend E. Kelhofer; prayer-meeting secretary, Reverend C. M. Myers; entertainment committee, Mrs. Dovey and Mrs. W. W. Lockwood. The new president superceded Dr. Frank Rawlinson in the chair immediately after the election of officers.

An interesting and hitherto unreported sidelight was thrown on the Far Eastern Olympic by Mr. G. S. Phelps of the Y. M. C. A., who described a meeting held last week by Christian athletes of Japan, the Philippines and China, and their plan to form a Far Eastern League of Christian Students. Dr. T. H. Lee presided at the meeting, during which several speakers emphasised the need for men who acknowledge Christ to work together for the betterment of international relations. A committee composed of two men from each nationality was appointed to arrange for the formation of such a league, after the resolution had been presented by one of the Filipino athletes. Another resolution was passed providing for a similar meeting when the next Far Eastern Olympic takes place in Japan.

MAIN ADDRESS

The main address of the evening was delivered by Dr. Frank Rawlinson, retiring president of the Association, who spoke on "The Right Approach to the Christian Message in China." Dr. Rawlinson pleaded for an agreement on fundamentals among missionaries of divergent religious ideas in order to prevent confusion in the minds of the Chinese.

"To Chinese Christians, the Christian message has come to mean a number of concomitant messages," Dr. Rawlinson said. "Something must be done to prevent Christianity from being a disruptive factor rather than a unifying force. Their attention is arrested by striking divergencies in belief, ranging, for instance, from the idea that a child in its original nature is lost to the doctrine that he is born in the Kingdom."

As a step toward unity in teaching Dr. Rawlinson declared that the statement of the Christian message should be Scriptural whether or not the missionary believed that the Bible was written by direct inspiration, that it should meet China's peculiar needs, and that it should be general rather than specific. It should emphasise the fullness of life as shown in Christ, and the spirit of love to God and to man.

FORCE LACKING

"China already possesses many ethical ideals, but the poor reflection of these ideals in national and individual life shows the lack of a dynamic force necessary to make them realised," the speaker said. "Christianity supplies this dynamic power by giving a personal response to a personal love. In teaching the Gospel, it must be remembered that the Chinese concept of 'father' does not contain the full Christian idea of God's relation to His children, as their idea of a father is a person who demands submission and holds himself somewhat aloof to obtain it. Their notion of a Supreme Being is a fairly high one, however, and there is nothing in their literature corresponding to the things said about Jehovah in the imprecatory psalms. Therefore missionaries should not emphasise parts of the Scripture likely to give a false impression.

"To tell the Chinese to be good is not an original Christian message, as they already have an intricate code of ethics. They have also developed to a small extent the idea of loving one's neighbor as one's self, though there is a stronger tendency to put love below respect for seniority. In practice most Chinese have confined the application of love to the family circle, the Confucianists saying that love lessens in direct proportion to the degree of relationship.

"Confucianism moves too much in the direction of culture; Taoism and Buddhism tend to turn away from the world. Christianity both furnishes a dynamic force for the carrying out of ideals and by no means promotes pacifism toward social and economic problems."

Discussion from the floor followed the reading of the paper.

Foreign Child Is Hit By Motor Car

A four-year-old boy, Nickola Cheimels, son of the proprietor of the Continental Hotel, was knocked down by a motor car in front of the hotel, on Szechuen Road, yesterday morning when he toddled into the street. He was taken to the General Hospital in an unconscious condition and is suffering from bruises but was not seriously injured. Spectators stated that the chauffeur was in no way to blame for the accident, but tried strenuously to avoid striking him.

JAPAN'S PRINCE

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 6.—The Crown Prince of Japan this morning motored to Chantilly and was entertained to lunch by the Franco-Japanese Society. Afterwards His Imperial Highness visited the chateaux of Compeigne and Pierrefonds. This evening he will give a dinner at the Japanese Embassy in honor of President Millerand.

The French press publishes numerous articles regarding the Crown Prince's visit, which, they say, is cementing the cordial relations already existing between France and Japan. The "Journal" expresses the hope that the Crown Prince's visit will increase the economic relations between France and Japan.

Interviewed by the New York Herald, Prince Hirohito declared that he was sure that his visit to France would be of the greatest benefit to himself. He regretted that he was unable to visit America at present, but he hoped that that was only a deferred pleasure. The Crown Prince also expressed the hope that America and Japan would ever be found working together in the cause of right and justice.

Paris, June 6.—Prince Hirohito tonight entertained at dinner at the French Embassy a distinguished company, comprising President and Madame Millerand, M. Briand and other members of the Cabinet, with their wives.

NOTICE

The people who never get rich are those who leave their money lying in the bank, or lock it up in practically unproductive investments. They often do it from carelessness, but oftener from timidity. A return of five or six per cent. per annum is all that comes to them. They feel that this is inadequate, and "hug" to believe that their money is "Safe" and that they run no risk of any kind.

Spot bar silver was up 1/8d. and forward 1/4d. in London yesterday.

The New York price declined to 57⅜ cents and the London-New York cross rate to 377¾. The change in the official rates today were a drop in the Gold Dollar rate to 60¼ and a rise in the Yen rate to 77. The market was firm throughout the day.

At the opening business in Sterling was done at 3/4¾ and in Gold Dollars at 65. During the course of the day, however, business in Sterling was done as high as 3/5⅛ and in Gold Dollars at 65½.

At the close the market was perhaps a shade easier with sellers of Sterling at 3/5 June delivery and 3/4⅞ for forward.

There were sellers of Gold Dollars at 65¼ for both near and forward deliveries. Our money market here is firming up again and banks are good sellers for near deliveries.

The London silver market is reported as being steady and at this level it is not at all unlikely that China will come into the market as a buyer of silver.

A rise in silver, therefore, within the next day or two would not appear improbable.

Hall And Holtz, Ltd.

The annual general meeting of Hall and Holtz, Ltd. was held yesterday at the secretaries' office at 14 Nanking road with 6,624 shares in attendance. Chairman J. D. Clarke of the board of directors presided, with Directors R. S. Ivy and Eric Moller, and Secretary G. H. Bartlett supporting.

The chairman in his speech said:

"It is a matter of great regret to your directors that they are unable to place before you a more satisfactory result of the year's trading than that shown in the accounts. The turnover has been a good one, so far as actual sales are concerned, but there have been many difficulties to contend against, all of which have tended, more or less, to reduce the profit on our business. Goods are costing more than in pre-war days, and although our stock, in bulk, is about the same as formerly, its value is considerably larger and consequently, our overdraft, which has reached the full limit allowed by the bank, is a burden on our trading operations, and we shall not obtain relief from the heavy charge for interest until we are able to reduce our standing liabilities.

"This matter is engaging the serious attention of your directors, and they hope in the near future, to be able to improve the position in this respect. Erratic and late shipments have been the cause of goods arriving here in large quantities at one time, many of them being out-of-season, necessitating storage until the proper time comes for their sale, but attendant extra expenses are incurred thereby, and have to be provided for. Owing to the higher cost of living, we have had to increase salaries in many instances, and the account under this heading is therefore, very much larger than previously, besides which, extraordinary expenses for home leave pay, and passages, due in some cases to sickness, have been very heavy indeed.

CONCERNING ACCOUNTS

"Turning to the accounts you will observe that we have sub-divided our land and building accounts of the Shanghai property, and this same procedure will be adopted with our other properties next year, the figures connected therewith not having reached us in time for embodiment in the present accounts. We have had the Shanghai property, on which this store stands, re-valued, and it is a pleasure to me to be able to state that the figures given are greatly in excess of those shown in the accounts as book value.

"The total stock at Shanghai and Branches amounts to $945,065.56, an increase of $241,382.65 over last year, and this as I said before, explains our large overdraft with the Bank. Sundry debtors stand at $120,278.84, a reduction of $6,906.22 on last year's amount. In this connection I would like to say that all outstanding items have been most carefully examined, and after deducting the allowance made for bad and doubtful debts the present figure may be regarded as a good asset.

"I can assure you that it is a matter of great regret to the board that they cannot declare any dividend this year, but the non-liquid state of their assets precludes them from doing so. It is worthy of note, however, to point out that last year no less a sum than $48,621.44 was written-off properties and fixtures, and this year we propose to depreciate them still further by $43,106.97.

The following resolutions were presented and carried:

1.—That the report and statement of accounts be passed as presented, proposed by the chairman, seconded by Dr. Ivy.

2.—That the disposal of profits as recommended be adopted, proposed by the chairman, seconded by Mr. Moller.

3.—That Mr. Eric Moller be re-elected a director, proposed by Mr. Bateman, seconded by Mr. Remedios.

4.—That Messrs. Lowe Bingham and Matthews be re-elected auditors for the ensuing year, proposed by Mr. Bateman, seconded by Mr. Remedios.

A Real League Offered

(New York Tribune)

THE note of the Allies asking the United States to become a member of the Supreme Council raises in direct form a momentous issue.

This issue is whether this country shall cling to the aloofness that formerly marked its policy or enter upon reasonable participation in world affairs. On the one side stand the isolationists, who are controlled by their fears, and on the other side stand those, controlled by their hopes and their sense of duty, who believe that this country is now grown up and that both its glory and its interests demand that it become a full-statured member of the company of great nations.

On this issue The Tribune, unreservedly and emphatically, votes "yes." So doing it is persuaded that it is in accord with the great body of virile Americans. McKinley more than twenty years ago declared that the day of aloofness was past. Roosevelt, with his elemental energy, espoused the same view, and so, for many years, has practically every conspicuous public man of America. No plebiscite has been taken for President Wilson made this impossible, but countless informal expressions of public opinion leave little doubt of which idea predominates.

If historic Americanism, in its depths, has stood for anything it has been for human brotherhood. Every noble hour in the country's history so adjures. We went alone for a time. Our growth needed to harden. But always in the background was the thought of the coming of a day when the country's mission would be fulfilled through the general acceptance of democratic principles. Time rang its bell when free countries of Europe, imperilled by the German onslaught, called on us for aid and we gladly gave it.

Are we to go forward or to draw back? The war created an association of nations which for the indefinite future is to preserve the world's peace, if peace is to be preserved. No other mundane authority has either the will or the ability to establish world order. If we join the grand alliance no one will question its decrees. If we stay out disharmony is almost certain to develop and new rival national alignments may be expected soon to bring on a new and deadlier conflict.

The hope of general disarmament, of settlement of disputes by arbitration, of a growth of a more humane international law—these things depend, in all likelihood, on the answer returned by Washington to the invitation of the Allied powers. If we hold apart, saying the general business is no part of our business, then we may expect the forging of cannon, the concoction of deadly poisons, the creation of deadlier weapons to continue, with this country compelled by prudence to join in the mad competition.

The obscurities that have enveloped the league of peace idea for two and one-half years are swept aside. Membership in a real league, the only kind of league capable of minimising the war danger, is offered to us. How can any true American who loves his country and would have it play an exalted role justify opposition to a prompt acceptance?

How The War Was Won

Major General Sir F. Maurice. The Last Four Months. By Little, Brown and Co.

Marshal Foch remarked the other day that the truth about the great war had not been told, intimating that it would be disclosed in due course. The inference is that the Marshal will some day use his pen as skilfully as he handled his sword. So far no prominent actor in the war on the side of the Allies has made a contribution, unless the voluminous dispatches of Field Marshal Haig be reckoned as history. But only military men, as a rule, have read them; they do not form a connected and illuminating narrative appealing to the general reader. What he knows about the Great War is obtained from popular histories like Sir Conan Doyle's.

No one should neglect General Sir Frederick Maurice's "The Last Four Months: How the War was Won." It is an admirable example of clear statement, impartial reasoning and judicial summing up by a soldier who has a remarkable descriptive gift and who as a staff officer had access to valuable records.

General Maurice clears up several matters that have been in controversy, as, for instance, who was responsible for "unity of command" and the appointment of General Foch to supreme authority. General Maurice declares that the man who brought about unity of command was Ludendorff, by his drive in the end of March, 1918, that threatened to separate the French and British Armies, isolate Paris and force Haig back, vanquished and helpless, on the Channel ports. But the decision was made at Doullens on March 26. Lloyd George, says General Maurice had "worked for unity of command." Clemenceau had been "quietly preparing the way." Sir Douglas Haig was at no time averse, and, as we know, President Wilson had urged it. But the very capable and hard-hitting Ludendorff hastened it.

General Maurice tells the story of the last four months of fighting with admirable brevity, and it may be said that his impartiality is charming, if it is well calculated. He had several interviews with Foch, and always found him imperturbable and confident. In a crisis that "tried men's souls," the General said tersely, "I am still fighting, and I have first to stabilise the front of battle. Ludendorff will probably try again, but he won't get through."

It has been a common thought of those depressed by the little wars that have followed in the wake of the Great War and by the obstructive tactics of the Germans at the Peace Conference and since, that the armistice was a tragic mistake. They contend that Foch should have continued to deal his hammer blows at the enemy and kept up his pursuit. General Maurice, who was along the lines at the finish and made a study of transport conditions, dissents. He declares that the allied armies were too far ahead of their trains to force the fighting any longer. "The plain fact is," he says, "that on, or very soon after, November 11 it would, had hostilities been continued, have been necessary to call a halt of the allied armies between the Dutch frontier and the Meuse until the roads and railways behind them had been repaired and the services of supply were again able to work normally." It is expert, unbiased opinion, and it can be accepted as the honest belief of an experienced observer, who would have preferred as a British officer to take the contrary view.

A Case For The League

(By Theodore Marburg)

Ought the fact that forward-looking international action may happen to be under the auspices of the League of Nations bar us from associating ourselves with such action? Of course, there are men in the United States Senate who, having succeeded in keeping us out of the League, now want to kill it. They rejoice in any opportunity to belittle the League and to them any acts of ours which tend to give countenance to the League are anathema. But to the unprejudiced mind it would seem that there is no reason why our Government, while declining to join the League for the time being in obedience to the decision of the electorate last Autumn, should assume an air of even indirect hostility to it. If we think that membership involves danger for us, we have a right to refuse to join. But have we a right to hamper this effort to make a beginning at real international organisation?

On the contrary, to remain out and to be willing at the same time to see the experiment succeed would not be inconsistent. It would only be large-minded. The magnanimous course would be to help the League succeed. There was a fine chance to do this when the Panama-Costa Rica dispute flamed up. President Roosevelt, it will be remembered, went out of his way to find the first case for the Hague Tribunal. He dug out, from the files of the State Department, the neglected Pius Fund Case for this purpose.

On March 4 the Council of the League of Nations dispatched an identical telegram to Panama and Costa Rica reminding them of their obligations under the Paris covenant to preserve peace, and asking for the facts. This message was crossed by one from Panama bringing the matter to the attention of the League and stating that she (Panama) had accepted the good offices of the United States. In its reply the Council welcomed the latter announcement and asked to be kept informed of developments. A similar message was sent to Costa Rica after that country had answered the original inquiry of the Council. So far as we know, the United States has taken no notice whatever of the League of Nations in this connection.

Our guarantee of the territorial integrity of Panama put that country, it is true, under an implied obligation to us to commit no act of injustice to other nations which would be likely to invite war. But the League of Nations has, with both disputants, a treaty containing not an implied but a specific obligation to preserve peace. We might well have said to the Council of the League: "Our treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of Panama gives us a special interest in her dispute with Costa Rica. But we realise that we cannot lay down rules of action for other nations and ourselves refuse to conform to them. We therefore associate ourselves with you in calling upon both countries to cease fighting. If forcible intervention should be called for, we expect the nation associated in the League to give us the mandate for such intervention in conformance to the principles of the Monroe Doctrine which they have recognised in the Paris covenant."

Such action would have disclosed a friendly spirit which the whole world would have appreciated. It would have reasserted our claim to be the mandatary where forcible intervention in this hemisphere is called for. It would have helped, instead of slighting, the League of forty-eight sister nations. And it would have disclaimed, in the eyes of Latin America, intention to use high-handed methods in intervening in their affairs.

If we insist on the "go-it-alone" policy, how can we complain if other nations adopt it in other parts of the world? And what, then, becomes of international co-operation to prevent war? Would-be aggressors will decline to see the difference between imposing one's will on a backward nation and on any small nation however progressive.

France And The Napoleon Centenary

It was unavoidable that the French should especially commemorate May 5 the hundredth anniversary of Napoleon's death. Thoughtful citizens of the French Republic may have feared certain bad effects of the celebration, but they would have been powerless to stay the general impulse. When France was still vibrating with the pride of her great victory, how was it possible to keep her from exalting the memory of the man who is for all time the incarnation of French military glory? Napoleon plucked the very heart of it, as Lord Rosebery has written. And it was inevitable that France should now look back to him as the incomparable genius of war.

French Generals, like Mangin, are naturally seeking likenesses between the soldier who rode his horse over the prostrate form of feudal Europe and the Marshal of today who led the allied armies to triumph. Foch would be the first to disclaim the compliment and to show how futile is the comparison. It is enough that the modern great commander rose equal to his mighty task, and that in his achievement he displayed moral qualities higher than those of Napoleon. One of the latter's reputed sayings is: "What is the death of a million soldiers to a man like me?" But Marshal Foch had the restraint and the humanity to stay his hand when on the eve of a stupendous victory, declaring that the "results" for which he had been fighting were secure without it, and that he would not ask 50,000 more brave men to give up their lives in order that his planned campaign should be pushed until the Teutonic hosts were enveloped and compelled to lay down their arms.

It is to be hoped that this contrast will be in the thoughts of France during the centenary, and that she will take to heart the lessons which her own historians have taught her. Napoleon's mad ambitions, his ruthless project, to bring all Europe and even Asia under the domination of the French Empire, his disregard of the human wastage and the immense miseries of war—all this should now be subordinated to praise of Napoleon the lawgiver, the administrator, the quickener of industry and of transportation. France does not need to gird herself for another great war. She has to bend her energies to recovery and rebuilding—tasks similar to those which Napoleon undertook in 1805. The methods which he employed about that time to construct splendid roads, open canals, reorganise public finance, foster manufactures, cultivate foreign trade and, in general, diffuse prosperity and a sense of well-being throughout France are well worth study and imitation at the present time.

A nation as well as an individual is judged in part by its heroes. But there is such a thing as discriminating in their worship. The Napoleonic legend, in its malign power, was broken and rejected in France after the Second Empire. According to the biting word of Bismarck in 1871, Louis Napoleon "killed himself and buried his uncle." There will be no Bonapartist revival. And the best friends of France hope and believe that, paying honor as she does today to her greatest military genius, she will show to the world that she has no thought of plunging again into militarism. Having conquered peace, let her prove that, while ready to insist upon the rights guaranteed to her by the Versailles Treaty, she intends to devote herself to the works of peace and to spread its blessings throughout her fair land.

"Poplar" Will Crooks is dead!

Wherever the news is flashed throughout the British Empire, there will be found men and women, who will remember the genial labor leader, and who will feel his loss at a time when labor needs a man so intensely sane, lovable and human as Will Crooks.

It is a long, difficult journey for the American to make from "Log Cabin to White House." It was every bit as difficult for Will Crooks to travel from his place in the workhouse to his seat in the House of Commons. But he made the journey, and at every stage of it he acquired friends and admirers. The King showed his appreciation of fine service by making the "Worker" the "Right Honorable" some little time ago.

Ill health forced him from his position of the poor's guardian, and sent him to the arms of the woman, who for nigh on thirty years was his guardian.

Mrs. Will Crooks, shortly after her husband's retirement, wrote the following charming article for a London Weekly, in which she tells the love story of Will Crooks:

WILL CROOKS' LOVE AFFAIR

Thirty years ago I was a widow and Will Crooks was a widower.

I had no family to comfort me; he had six little ones, the youngest a boy of two years, the eldest a girl of sixteen.

Everybody knew Will Crooks. He was a public man, a Guardian, and a member of the London County Council. In the former capacity he was, in a way, my master—he would say he ceased to be when he married me, but that is only his nonsense!—for after my first husband's death I had obtained a post in the lunatic ward of Poplar Union.

It was inevitable that we should meet, because I lived with his mother in Poplar, and Will used to drop in pretty frequently.

If pity is the first step to love, then I surely pitied him. He was having a very rough time.

Not only had he no home worth the name, but his children were getting quite out of hand. Will used to tell me his troubles, and one day I said to him, "What you want, Mr. Crooks, is a good, capable wife to look after you, and the children. It isn't every woman'll face it," I went on. "To start married life with a husband and six children is enough to make any woman think twice, and then twice again. But if you could find the right one it would be a blessing."

"Well," he said, in his quiet way, "I've had the same thought myself, and I don't mind telling you I've got my eye on the very woman for the job."

"Then if I were you," I said, "I'd lose no time in telling her so, and seeing what she says. You have my very best wishes."

"It's You," he said, quietly.

"Never!" I said. "I've been married once, and that is quite enough for one lifetime. No! I couldn't face it."

"Think it over," he said.

Will had everything in his favor. I knew he had been a kind husband to his first wife. I knew he was a good son. He was, too, respected and beloved by all. These things I knew. But they did not bring me to the point of saying "Yes."

Later he said, "Well, haven't you made up your mind to come to me?"

I answered, "No. Those children daunt me. It's a big undertaking. I don't feel equal to it."

"Well," he said sadly, "I can't find anyone else more suitable or sensible, and if you don't take me and the kiddies I'll have to break up my home—and—it'll break my heart."

That touched me. So, quite suddenly, I said, "Will you promise me one thing?"

"I'll promise you anything if you'll be my wife," he said.

"The minute I marry you," I said, "I shall be a stepmother, and you know the name step mothers get. Nobody knows better than you do that the children are out of hand. I'm almost a stranger to them. I shall have to get their obedience before I win their love, for if they don't respect me they'll never love me—and I may have to punish them—"

"Well," he interrupted. "Of course."

"Yes," I said, "It's of course now, but will it always be so? Will you trust me to be just as well as kind?"

I was satisfied with his answer. We were married. I've never regretted it, and I don't think Will has.

Will Crooks was guardian by name and guardian by nature. And now our roles on the stage of life are reversed. The active hand and foot are feeble, although the brain is still bright, and I have to be his guardian.

By Elizabeth Crooks.

And now the faithful wife's guardianship is over, and "Poplar" Will Crooks has gone to that wonderland to reap the just reward of his labors in a "peace that passeth all understanding."

"One leads where many follow."

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper

is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

OLD COMMANDERS' YARNS

(Admiral Sir Percy Scott)

In all our practices, while one man was firing, others were exercised in judging whether the target was hit; if it was a miss, they had to judge how far it was left or right, or how much it was short or over.

The sailors called this "spotting drill," and christened the officer or man who was spotting the "Spotter."

Our best spotter in H.M.S. Terrible was a cook.

Spotting also a pleasure.

Flight Of Bullet And Of Baseball

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS
(Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Subjects of Popular Interest)

"Considering a baseball when thrown in the air, through which stages does the ball travel faster, going up or coming down? Does it travel at the same rate both ways?—J. H. L."

In a vacuum it would travel at the same rate throughout its trajectory, but in the air its velocity is gradually reduced, although the difference might not be noticeable over a short flight.

The case is analogous to that of a projectile fired from a gun. Without air resistance the trajectory would be a parabolic curve, the highest point would be reached when exactly half the horizontal range had been passed over, and the descent would occupy the same time and cover the same distance as the ascent. But in the air the motion is increasingly slackened, so that the highest point lies ahead of the centre of the flight, and the curve of descent is steeper and shorter than that of ascent.

Here are some figures calculated for the army rifle, which show how the velocity diminishes when a light projectile is fired at high speed over a long distance. At 100 yards from the muzzle the bullet moves 1,780 feet per second; at 300 yards, 1,420 feet; at 600 yards, 1,044 feet; at 1,200 yards, 755 feet; at 1,600 yards, 630 feet, and at 2,000 yards, 530 feet.

There are many circumstances to be taken into account in calculations of this kind. The retardation varies with the size of the ball or projectile, with its shape, with its speed, with the density of the air, with the direction and force of the wind, etc.

Modern artillerists with very powerful long-range guns strive to get their projectiles quickly up to a high elevation where the great decrease of the atmospheric density results in a corresponding falling off of resistance. In the next war it is probable that shells may be thrown a hundred miles or more, the larger part of their paths lying far above the highest levels at which clouds are able to form.

"Would you kindly give me the origin and definition of "B. T. U." and its relation to coal?—J. V. D."

"B. T. U." means British Thermal Unit. It is the unit of heat, or of heating power, employed by engineers in Great Britain and the United States. It is defined as the quantity of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water through one degree Fahrenheit. Water is used as the standard because it requires a greater quantity of heat than any other substance to produce a given change in its temperature.

The application to coal and other fuels is as follows: If the coal is burned under experimental conditions the number of thermal units that a measured weight of it gives off in the course of complete combustion can be ascertained.

The engineer then knows how much heating power is at his command in a given number of pounds of coal. For instance, one pound of the best anthracite yields in burning about 14,500 B. T. U.'s, i. e., the amount of heat stored up in the coal and released by the combustion would raise the temperature of 14,500 pounds of water one degree. This supposes of course that none of the heat is wasted.

Under the same conditions a pound of the best bituminous coal may be said to contain about 15,000 B.T.U.'s, a pound of dry wood about 7,500, a pound of gasolene 21,000, of natural gas 22,000. To ascertain the theoretical value of any quantity of fuel in heat units you have only to multiply the number of pounds of the fuel that you possess by the number of B.T.U.'s corresponding to one pound of it. Thus a ton of anthracite, perfectly burned, would give off 29,000,000 heat units.

Knowing the number of heat units, you can easily turn them into units of mechanical power or work. Thus one B.T.U. equals 788 foot-pounds, and one horse-power equals 500 foot-pounds per second, or 33,000 foot-pounds per minute. From one B.T.U. you would, therefore, get, if you could make its full value available, nearly one and a half horse-power working for one second.

In pure scientific calculations the heat unit employed is not the B.T.U., but the calorie. There are two calories, the great and the small calorie, the former being a thousand times larger than the latter. A great calorie, or engineer's calorie, is defined as the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one kilogram of water one degree centigrade, while a small calorie is the quantity of heat that will raise one gramme of water one degree centigrade. The great calorie is about four times as large a quantity of heat as the B.T.U.
